How Can the Research Commons Help

- Are you looking for the tools and training that can assist you in navigating the research process?
- Do you want to connect with experts from across campus who can support your research?
- Would you like to meet and collaborate with researchers in other disciplines?

Then the Research Commons is for you! Explore the services and resources available to you as a researcher by clicking on the phases of the research lifecycle below, connecting with experts, and browse our list of upcoming events.

Funding Opportunities

Ohio State's Office of Research can help faculty, post-doctoral, graduate, and undergraduate researchers match specific funding needs to available funding opportunities, both internal and external to the university.

Other resources and services offered by the Office of Research include:

- Access to the SPIN database, with over 40,000 funding opportunities from nearly 10,000 global sponsors
- Coordination of the application process for limited submission funding opportunities, in which the sponsor restricts the number of proposals that an institution can submit
- Assistance with identifying and coordinating the submission of nominations for scholarly prizes and awards

UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES

What Can You Do at the Research Commons?

Participate in a Workshop to build skills in areas spanning all phases of the research lifecycle – planning, conducting, publishing, and increasing impact

Schedule a Consultation with one of our many research support experts for one-on-one assistance with your research needs

Reserve a Room for small-group and large-group collaborative projects, videoconferencing, data visualization, and much more

Attend a Showcase Event to learn more about the great research happening at Ohio State and to network with colleagues and peers from across the university

Visit Our Computer Lab to explore an advanced suite of software available for carrying out your research projects

Find Your Spot - a quiet, comfortable place on campus where you can focus on your research

What is the Research Commons?

- A place where researchers can connect with each other and with services that support and enable their work
- A campus hub for collaborative and interdisciplinary research across all fields, with a special focus on Data Management, Digital Humanities, and Geographic Information Systems (GIS)

Creating a User Community

Breaking the Mold

“As a graduate student who has been here for almost four years, this is the first time I feel as though there's a space (a well-lit, comfortable, accessible, and technology-updated space) for graduate research use.”

- Feedback from English graduate student (Feb. 22, 2016)

Future Work

- Formalize a plan for assessment
- Hire additional staff
- Consistently build user base
